COVID-19 Tribal Resources Introduction:

Purpose:

The purpose of this document is to provide a guide to tribal specific resources and programs capable of being used to respond and recover from the impacts of COVID-19.

This document is subject to change as new programs are approved, deadlines shift, and organizational guidance documents are released and will continue to be updated and distributed as needed. It is intended for use as a tool for future tribal resource planning and to promote partnership between resource providers and tribal entities. For the most up to date and accurate programmatic information, interested parties should visit each individual organization's website or work directly with the relevant entity.

Structure:

This document begins with a listing of 18 identified tribal specific resources. It is divided into short, intermediate and long-term resources. All provided dates are estimated and subject to change. For the purposes of this document, 'short, intermediate and long term' are defined as follows:

Short-term: The resource has the capability of being utilized in the next 90 days.

Intermediate: The resource has the capability of being utilized in the next 3 – 6 months.

Long-term: The resource has the capability of being utilized in the next 6 – 12+ months.

The document concludes with additional resources that may be of interest to state, local, territorial and tribal organizations as well as a list of known resource application deadlines as currently posted on the programmatic websites.

The appendix provides further information that may be useful to tribal entities and partners, including:

1. A table of 2020 fiscal year tribal specific resources with past deadlines. These programs may be renewed for the 2021 fiscal year and thus may be used for long-term planning.
2. A table detailing all COVID-19 supplemental programs with a total funding allotment larger than 1 billion dollars. Though these programs are not tribe specific, tribes are eligible to receive assistance from these programs as a result of recent legislation.
3. A matrix of the 18 tribal specific resources detailed in this document cross walked against certain programmatic criteria.

Much of the information provided in this document was exported from FEMA'S MAX-TRAX Recovery Resource Library. For more information on the MAX-TRAX Recovery Resource Library please see the "Additional Resources" section of this document as well as a linked document outline all currently identified COVID-19 tribe eligible MAX-TRAX Recovery Resource Library entries.

The provision of services to address immediate needs resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic may be eligible for reimbursement under Category B (Emergency Protective Measures) of FEMA's Public Assistance (PA)

Program. Entering into formal agreements or contracts with food banks to provide the necessary food commodities; 2. Demonstrating that the work and costs incurred were reasonable and necessary in order to respond to the COVID-19 public health emergency. Pre-Disaster Recovery Planning Guide for Tribal Governments

Resource Type/Services: Informational

Agency/Organization: (USDHS) Department of Homeland Security (FEMA specific)

Funding Type: N/A

Program Description: The Pre-Disaster Recovery Planning Guide for Tribal Governments provides a basic framework and guidance for tribal leadership and stakeholders as they plan for recovery and recognizes that different tribes have different levels of capacity and different ways of planning. This guidance is applicable to both federally recognized and state recognized tribes and is appropriate preparation for all incidents with or without a Presidential Disaster Declaration.

Total Program Funding: N/A

Max Award: N/A

Eligibility: N/A

Eligibility Description/Use: This guide is for tribal government leadership and stakeholders who will be involved in the recovery process after a disaster. These stakeholders may include: the tribal chief executive and tribal government employees, including planners and emergency managers, healthcare professionals, and experts in natural and/or cultural resource preservation

Process: This guide focuses on three levels of activity that correspond to varying degrees of tribal capacity. Note that even though this guide categorizes different planning activities based on a tribe's capacity to implement them, all tribes should strive to develop full recovery plans which document recovery roles and responsibilities and planning goals. This may require the use of outside resources, some of which are listed in Annex D of this guide.

Part 1: Basic Planning Activities – Activities that tribes with minimal resources can do, such as identifying and documenting recovery partners, available resources and resource gaps, essential financial and management procedures, and vital community assets that may be focal points for recovery planning efforts after a disaster.

Part 2: Recommended Planning Activities – Activities which build on the basic recovery activities listed above, such as establishing recovery priorities, adopting a recovery ordinance, and writing or building on an existing comprehensive plan or hazard mitigation plan.

Part 3: Developing a Recovery Plan – Tribes with significant resources and government staff (or the ability to hire consultants) should consider developing a formal pre-disaster recovery plan. A pre-disaster recovery plan is a holistic planning document that identifies known hazards and vulnerabilities, existing capabilities, recovery goals, recovery roles, responsibilities and procedures, and known (or needed) partnerships with federal or state governments, and with non-governmental organizations (NGOs).
